ADVENTURE BASE

Adventure Base boost high mountain experience with Dream Guides merger

Adventure Base and Dream Guides have announced they are merging as Adventure Base continues on its path to become the worlds premiere adventure provider.

Rhiannon Cook, Head of Business Development explains “Dream Guides products will now be available as part of our Global Adventure’s thus adding to our growing number of premium courses, trips and experiences around the world”

Dream Guides have been taking people on exceptional journeys since 2005. Based in the alpine capital of Chamonix Mont Blanc, the company was originally set up by British climber and 11-time Everest summiteer Kenton Cool, and ski alpinist Guy Willett.

The Dream Guides brand will remain present as a mark of excellence in high mountain adventures. Dream Guides will continue to offer global climbing, trekking and skiing courses and expeditions as well as bespoke and flexible private guiding.

All the trips and courses are packaged together using the company’s original ethos i.e. combining places of exceptional natural beauty with fun activities; varying degrees of human endurance and authentic guides that know and love the areas in which they work.

Their best selling climb Mont Blanc course, based on their doorstep, gives anyone the chance to experience the exceptional world of the big mountains and summit Western Europe’s highest mountain. The course is set over six days of guiding, and will teach you the skills needed to tackle this iconic mountain.

With the support and guidance of director Kenton Cool, [and utilising his experience of 11 Everest summits amongst numerous other successful expeditions] Adventure Base is setting its sights on becoming the worlds premier adventure provider.
